The lock was not picked.

No one kicked in the door. There was no broken glass on the floor. Some- one brah- oke in- to my heart, I woke up and they were there. Some how I lost the key to my love

Well. I called the cops, Tried to press charg- es for tres- pass- ing

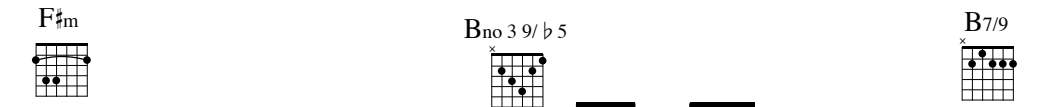

He said, "We've all been there before. Some one brooke in to your heart, they walked in with out knock- ing. some how they found the key to yo- our love." Then he said, he said, "To day the skies seem grey and cloud- ee but there are so ma- ny peo- ple who are look- ing for what you have found.

I fixed the lock. Got that key in a safe- er spot. I could- n't share it if I felt I should. I filed a claim, but the new stuff won't be the same, and I'm think- ing 'bout chang- ing my neigh- bor- hood. Some- one bro- oke in to my heart they took ev- ry- thing worth keep- ing all they left me was bit- ter to lo- - - ve
